

Busy but not getting anywhere?

You might be running on tactics
without strategy.

Here's what that looks like (and why it's a problem).

1.

Driving without a map

You're burning fuel, but likely to get lost.

2.

Building without a blueprint

You may construct something, but it won't be stable or useful.

3.

Playing chess with no plan

You react to every move, but you'll lose to someone with foresight.

Cooking without knowing the dish

You're busy in the kitchen, but the result may be inedible.

5.

Orchestra with no score

Each player may sound great, but together
it's chaotic noise.

6.

Sailing full speed with no compass

The ship moves fast—but you may end up wrecked.

7.

Spending on ads with no positioning

It's like shouting into a crowd without knowing what to say.

Watering weeds

You're putting in effort, but nurturing the wrong things.

Tactics need direction. Strategy gives it.

Don't just do more—do what matters.
